Monthly Commentary

Several positive developments in November mean that we are going into December on a high note, both globally and locally. The Biden US election win has buoyed global optimism around a more reasonable US when it comes to international relations. There are high hopes that a vaccine may be available early next year, if not before the end of this year.

China seems to be leading the globe when it comes to economic recovery post-Covid. If the pandemic originated in China, it does make sense that the economic recovery would begin in the same place. However, one wonders how much the economic recovery has to do with China's 996 working hour system, where employees work from 9am to 9pm, six days a week. Surely other economies would thrive under similar conditions. 2020 certainly seems set to go out with a bang, on the back of a pending Brexit deal, a US battle for the Senate, and two potential vaccine rollouts.

Locally, the arrest of Ace Magashule has reaffirmed some faith in President Cyril Ramaphosa. When he took office in May 2019, Cyril promised to address corruption and while the wheels of justice are turning slowly, there is definite movement in the right direction.

The R109.6 billion worth of collective investment pledges at the third South Africa Investment Conference has been widely hailed for putting the country firmly back on track towards securing the five-year R1.2 trillion investment target. But this was tempered within a week when ratings agencies, Fitch and Moody's, both downgraded SA further. Both agencies maintained a negative outlook, highlighting continued concerns around unsustainable government debt and lack of reforms. All eyes will be on SA in February when the National Budget is made public, outlining expenditure over the next three to five years. The FTSE/JSE SWIX Index gained 8.3%, Industrials were up 7.6% and Financials soared 18.0%. The JSE All Bond Index advanced 3.3%, while the rand appreciated by 4.8% relative to the US dollar.
