INVESTMENT MANAGER COMMENT

Global equity markets endured a challenging quarter as the MSCI All Country World Index, a broad measure of global equity markets, declined 5.4% during the period. The extent of the fall was not as severe for the Fund, having declined 4.2% during the quarter. Equity prices came under pressure during the quarter over the prospect of the US Federal Reserve raising interest rates. In an effort to tame record levels of inflation in the US, the central bank raised interest rates by 25 basis points with multiple rate hikes expected to follow, possibly at 50 basis points a clip. The yield on the longer-term 10-Year US treasury has risen above pre-pandemic levels but worryingly for some, the shorter-term 2-Year note rose even higher, leading to a flattening of the yield curve which inverted briefly as the 2-Year temporarily exceeded its longer-term counterpart. Recessions in the US are often preceded by an inverted yield curve though not all inversions lead to a recession. There are also reasons to believe that the inversion has been brought about by technical factors rather than economic fundamentals. The Russian invasion of Ukraine added further downward pressure to equity prices, especially those in Europe owing to their relative proximity to the conflict. The political uncertainty and economic ramifications led investors to seek comfort in safe haven assets such as gold and US treasuries. Commodities, specifically those whose production is meaningfully influenced by Russia, experienced significant price increases during the quarter. Russia supplies a large portion of Europe's energy needs which led the price of Brent crude to rise above $100 a barrel. Global automakers have reason for concern following sharp price rises in PGMs, key ingredients used in catalytic converters for internal combustion engines, as well as nickel, a core component contained in batteries for most electric vehicles. In general, companies held by the Fund reported robust quarterly earnings. Despite headwinds from the Russia-Ukraine war or rising interest rates, many of the companies that experienced depressed earnings during the pandemic highlighted improved outlooks with economies reopening. In contrast, those that benefited from pandemic tailwinds noted an expected return to normalised growth trajectories. However, a concern prevalent among most companies was the impact of rising inflation on input prices, an issue which is likely to be exacerbated by the recent surge in commodity prices. Taking the above into account, the Fund's top performing stocks during quarter were BHP, Shell, Berkshire, Raytheon and Medtronic, whereas the largest underperformers included Home Depot, Nike, Siemens, ASML and Samsung.
